

Assignments

Week 9, beginning 3/13/2006:
What we did and will do:

Tuesday: Surprise, surprise! It's a short week—there's no class on Thursday—so we haven't done anything yet but will today. Rewrites are still due Thursday, March 16 or sooner. Give them to me today, or before Thursday, drop them in my mailbox or email them as a Word or RTF attachment to Dave@Badtke.com

We will continue with our discussion of the articles you've read in the Identity section as well as with additional material from psychology and Sherman Alexie's "Indian Education."

To Do For Next Week:

Writing: Mid-term exam on Tuesday, March 21. Journal due on Thursday, March 23. Identity paper due March 30. See below.

Readings:

Previously assigned: Barry Lopez's "The American Geographies," pages 130-136; Bobbie Ann Mason's "Being Country," pages 136-140; Esmeralda Santiago's "Jibara," pages 140-146;

New readings: Sherman Alexie's "Indian Education," handout; Henry Louis Gates's "Joining the Church," pages 164-169; Diedre N McCloskey's "Yes, Ma'am," pages 170-175; Judy Brady's "I Want a Wife," pages 176-178.

Coming up:

- Rewrite due by Thursday, March 16. You can place it in my mailbox or email your paper as an attachment to Dave@Badtke.com.
- Mid-term exam, open book, open notes, on Tuesday, March 21: There will be a few questions regarding the identity readings, and I'll ask you to analyze some passages.
- Journal due Thursday, March 23.
- Identity paper due Thursday, March 30: Compare and contrast the identities portrayed by two or more authors you've read, and then describe your own identity development relative to what you've learned. Your paper should be 5-6 pages, double-spaced, ~1250-1500 words, with proper MLA headings, citations and Works Cited.

"Calvin and Hobbes" by Bill Watterson.
