

Assignments

Week 17, beginning 5/14/2007:

Congratulations on making it to your final week and to completing the CME. As you were handing in your responses, I got a chance to read some of them and found many of them to be well done. In most cases I found your essay structure to be sound and your grammar to be much improved. Many of you focused on important points in the prompt and argued your position with relevant evidence and pertinent inferences. While I won't know until Thursday, when the faculty gets together to read your CMEs, whether you've passed or not, as I was reading what you had written, I felt proud of what you had accomplished.

Monday:

- Of course, if you end up passing the CME but have done insufficient work in class, you still won't pass. Have you got past work in?
- Today we'll schedule times when you'll come in during your final exam period, from 8 to 10 this Friday, May 18, when I will tell you how you did in the class and on your CME, and we'll discuss your options. Make sure that you pick a time on the sign-up sheet that I'll pass around the room.
- The rest of the time today and Wednesday, we'll work on Units 11 – 14 in your Workbooks, portions of which will be due on Wednesday. I'll grade the workbooks and give them back to you on Friday.

Homework due Wednesday: Work on Workbook assignments that I'll give you in class.

Wednesday:

- We'll finish up the work required in the Workbooks, and you'll hand them in.

Homework due Friday: Show up during your assigned time to get your final results.

Friday:

- Come see me during your assigned time.

Have a great summer and good luck with college!
